MAKING ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE HARBOR CONVENTION.

List of St. Paul Delegates-Reduced Hote and Railroad Rates-Opera House the Place and 12 M. on the 18th the Time of Meeting - Reception Programme - Starting the Boom-Unfair Price of Flour.

At the meeting of the chamber of commerce yesterday, the following letter was read: PITISBURGH, Dec. 9, 1878.

President of Chamber of Commerce, St.

DEAR SIR: The committee on rivers and harbors to whom was referred the invitation of your chamber to appoint delegates to attend the commercial convention to be held in your city Dec. 18, this day offered the following preamble and resolutions, which were unani-mously adopted:

Our city is vitally interested in the practical improvement of the entire system of lake and river transportation—situated at the head of a widely extended system of rivers and lakes, the most of which may, by a moderate expenditure of means, on the part of the general government, be made accessable to steamers leaving our port. The products of Pittsburgh mines and manufactures are of such a heavy character as to render exclusive railroad ship ment impracticable, in view of the sharp competition of other communities.

We find no fault with and make no complaint against railroads. They are no doubt doing the best they can. But the future of our city de-mands the larger and cheaper facilities of water transportation. It is therefore important that the navigable condition of these water-ways be extended by artificial help, to every possible section of our country. Hence we regard it as a matter of great self-interest to join hands and co-operate with all parties interested in the improvement and extension of our inland navigation. Every additional mile of river made navigable, every lake

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul read declined to make any reduction. Other roads are yet to be heard from.

Messrs. W. L. Wilson, T. J. Barney and J. X. Davidson were appointed a committee to secure a room for the convention. The committee subsequently secured the Opera House.

Mr. H. M. Rice moved that the delegates be requested to register their names and hotel, at the chamber immediately upon their arrival, and that citizens be requested to call upon

The above prragraph may be found in the Minneapolis denartment of the Pioneer Press of Saturday. The object of the writer evident-ly was to praise our Minnesota flour, but like a two-edged sword in the hands of a weak person, it cuts both ways.

It is a matter of pride and profit to us that

The market price for our wheat on Saturday was from 40 to 78 cents; the St. Louis market for their wheat on the preceding day (Friday) was 89 cents and a fraction. Now, this brings out the pregnant fact that our people pay altogether too much for their

With the exception of the last three years the writer for fifteen years past has floured more or less wheat. His earlier transactions were with that pioneer miller and honest man, Mr. Brainerd, whose brand of flour was a great fa-vorite, and in all that career, though the flour was sold at twenty-five cents a sack, or a half dollar per barrel, less than millers wholesale rates, the profits, when full weight was received, were never less than 25 per cent. on the cost of the wheat.

If the people of Minneapolis can afford to have St. Louis flour shipped to them, let them do it, but I hope that the public sentiment of the city of St. Paul will be in favor of the best flour at a cheap rate for all her citizens.

Other things being equal, the city that furnishes the best and the cheapest food is the It is much better that all should be moder-

HOW IT DIDN'T RUN SMOOTH FOR PREMATURE "MAN AND WIFE."

Couple from Cannon Falls Arrive in St. Paul and Register as "N. E. Langren and Wife"-A Telegram Orders His Arrest which Causes a Tear to Trickle-A $30 Larceny Alleged-The Young Man Goes Back to Meet the Charge While the Young Lady Goes North.

Time, 11 o'clock A. M. A young man accompanied by a rather propossessing, slender blonde female walked into the European hotel on Third street near the corner of Jackson street.

She stood in the hall-way. He entered the office

AN HOUR LATER. Time, 12 o'clock M. A small boy enters police eadquarters, yanks a very much soiled book out or his pocket, flaps it open, and pulls his pocket, flaps it open, and pulls out a yellow enveloped telegraph message. He hands it to the chief of police. He opens it, then puts on his spectacles and reads it. The message was from Northield, and asks the arrest of "a young man, short, stubby, slight chin whiskers, all fingers off left hand, has a tall girl with him, who wears eye-glasses, and has light hair." The telegram was signed by the city marshal of Cannon Falls.

The telegram was passed over to Capt. Clark, and he was asked to find them.

Capt. Clark took a tour of the hotels, saw the "man and wife" chirography on the European hotel register. Just then "the wife" passed out. The information was given that "the husband" was also out. "The wife" made steps towards Potter's store on Jackson street. There she was shortly joined by "the husband." There Capt. Clark and Chief Weber introduced themselves.

TWO HOURS ROLL ON.

Time, 2 o'clock F. M: A quartette, three males

Time, 2 o'clock P. M: A quartette, three males and one female were seated in the chief's office, a police headquarters. There was room enough for police headquarters. There was room enough for one more, and a Globe man strolled in to make the party complete. Casual conversation, maintained, as it were, by the GLOBE man, revealed that the young man and young women were the parties registered, etc. His name was N. E. Langren, of Cannon Falls, He had been a bookkeeper in the employ of one Yale, hardware dealer. He had left that village last Sunday in the company of this young lady—pointing to her. "Yes," said she, "and my uncle Peter accompanied us to Northfield. I can't imagine what the matter can be."

Turning to him she said-

Turning to him she said—

"Are you sure your books are all right?"

"Gertam as life," he replied.

"Well, then, I just can't imagine whal's the mater," she exclaimed, plucking a way with desperate offort to skin her muff.

"Nor I," said he, quite dolefully.

Then as the conversation was mainly maintained by the Grobs, it was learned that the two had been seeping company for three years, and were en route to a brother's of the young lady in Glyndon, on the Northern Pacific road.

"We are going to be married," said he.

She nodded.

She nodded.

The GLOBE man reflected upon "the premature" registering at the European hotel, but dismissed it, with the thought that we live in a railroad-(fast) Meantime, Chief Weber had telegraphed to North-field to learn why the young man had been arcested. He received a reply that "the prematurely" married young man was wanted for larceny, and the further information that the marshal would be here at 6:30 'clock P. M.
This sad intelligence was communicated to the young couple.

"Oh Ned," she exclaimed.

"It's a lie, as sure as your name is Mollie Forresthal," he emphatically averred. As sure as I love you, he looked in addition to the foregoing declaraion.

A tear dimmed her sky blue eye, and trickled down to the bridge of her nose, and then it took a tumble on to her much-abused muff, where it gleamed like a liamond. A woman's tear!

FOUR HOURS AND A HALF MORE.

Time, 6:30 P M. The young lady has returned rom supper. The young man didn't want any. The Marshal had arrived. He stated that the young man was accused by his employer, Yale, of having stolen $30. He was good enough, and even earnest, in inparting his account, to say that he didn't believe, after all, that it would turn out very bad for the young man. he young man. "It stands just this way," said he, "Langren has been working for Yale for three years, and just before leaving he gave notice that he was going to quit him, and in two weeks—when he returned—he was going to work for another hardware firm in the place.

Langren has always been highly thought of. About his marrying the girl I know nothing. Her uncle, Peter Forresthal, went over to Northfield with them. Peter Forrestinal, went over to Northfield with them. Langren owns a farm near the girl's brother's place up on the North Pacific road."
"Are you going to separate them?"
"Yes, I suppose so. I have got to take him back, and she says she is going on to-morrow (to-day) to her brother's."

The marshal was as good as his word. He took the young man back last night.

The young girl staid at the European hotel; the register having been altered to accommodate her altered circumstances.

"The course of true love never did run smoothly."

In Minnesota. Holiday Goods.

In compliance with an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, approved March 1st, 1877, entitled "An act to provide for the completion of the lines of railroad commonly known as the Saint Paul and Pacific Extension lines," I will sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at my office, in the Capitol building, in St. Paul, on Wednesday, the 1sth day of December, 1878, and from day to day thereafter until the whole shall have been offered, about 3,000 acres of land in legal government subdivisions, situated in the county of Morrison and State of Minnesota, through which county the railroad is completed and in operation.

These lands are advantageously situated, convenient to settlements, are generally well watered and gently undulating, and consist of choice hard wood timber land, prairie and meadow, and are all within ten miles and most of them within six miles of the railroad track.

Maps are on file at the Executive office, showing the relative situation of these lands, and descriptive lists of them can botained by application in person or by letter to me.
